Behaviour Based Safety Guide Better Health And Safety

Behavior Based Safety or BBS is a scientific approach to positively reinforce a safe work environment by modulating unsafe behavioral patterns. A BBS system focuses on how people work, analyzes why they work in a certain way and applies an intervention strategy to eliminate unsafe behavior.

Behavior Based Safety (BBS) | Definitive Guide on BBS and ...

Behavior-Based Safety is successful because it fully engages the entire workforce. As injuries decrease, employee morale increases, allowing more cooperation and efficiency throughout the company. Instead of focusing on accidents, failure, punishment, and managerial goals, employees focus on safe behaviors and work toward their own safety goals.

Behavioural safety (bhav) programmes aim to improve safety by changing the behaviour of workers. They may also be called 'behavioural modification' or 'behaviour based safety'. Most bhav systems tend to believe that injuries (and possibly illnesses – see later) are the result of 'unsafe acts' by workers, and to prevent these unsafe

Behavioural safety - UNISON

There are two basic approaches to improving the human factors in safety: 1) changing the way people think and feel to change behaviour; or 2) directly address the behaviour to get people to do the right things at the right time. The first is encapsulated in 'hearts and minds' campaigns, while behavioural safety processes address the second.

Behavioural safety information and resources behaviour is in?uencing (positively or negatively) the behaviour of those we work with. Accordingly, starting with our own behaviour is an important mechanism to in?uence behaviour change at work, or anywhere else. That might be, for instance, to concentrate on one of these: • do things safer (more thoughtfully /slowly/ etc),

Behaviour Based Safety - Health and Safety Authority

In the behavior-based safety system we help our clients implement, managers have scorecards with a list of leader behaviors they should engage in to support BBS and safety in general. It always includes positively reinforcing observers for doing observations, and also always includes behaviors related to hazard remediation.
