Weber's concept remains important to sociologists today because the iron cage of technorational thought, practices, relations, and capitalism— now a global system —shows no signs of disintegrating anytime soon. The influence of this iron cage leads to some very serious problems that social scientists and others are now working to solve.

increased rationalization inherent in social life, particularly in Western capitalist societies. The "iron cage" thus traps individuals in systems based purely on teleological efficiency, rational calculation and control. Weber also described the bureaucratization of social order as "the polar night of icy darkness". The original German term is stahlhartes Gehäuse; this was translated into "iron cage", an ...
