The Human Comedy is a 1943 novel by William Saroyan. It originated as a 240-page film script written for MGM. Saroyan was planning to produce and direct the film, but he was dropped from the project either because the script was too long or because a short film he directed as a test did not pass muster—or both.

The Human Comedy (novel) - Wikipedia
Saroyan's THE HUMAN COMEDY is a highly patriotic, highly sentimental, vintage war-time narrative: it gently treats, in part, the tragic telegrams from the War Department that far too many American families received during the WW 2 period. The writing is particularly strong in the final third of the novel.

The Human Comedy, sentimental novel of life in a small California town by William Saroyan, published in 1943. The narrator of the story, 14-year-old Homer Macauley, lives with his widowed mother, his sister Bess, and his little brother Ulysses; his older brother has left home to fight in World War II. While family relationships and domestic situations are in the foreground, the events of the outside world, including the cataclysmic war, are never entirely out of the picture.

The Human Comedy | novel by Saroyan | Britannica
An absolutely stunning novel -- arguably Saroyan's best. For those unfamiliar with this incredible prose, "The Human Comedy" is a good place to start. Other reviewers here have posted detailed readings of the work, and I simply wanted to register my unqualified praise for this novel and Saroyan's work in general.

Books similar to The Human Comedy By William Saroyan
The story of The Human Comedy, poignant and richly autobiographical, is based both on author Saroyan’s fatherless life and the Greek classic Homer’s Odyssey. Beloved actress Meg Ryan shows us the boy becoming the man in a world that, even in the midst of war, appears sweeter, safer, and more livable than our own.
